For, as the Institute of Applied Law and Economics, in the early 1960s, supported the US in its military intervention in the war in Vietnam, this is not the first time the United Nations has been asked to act in the name of the US, in a situation where the US has been accused of using force when it was not able, or when it was not willing, to act in its own defense. The UN resolution marks its first authorisation of such action since 1991, and it is a clear indication of the US’s desire to use the UN as a tool to legitimise its actions.

The resolution, which was adopted by the Security Council on April 11, 1991, was the first in a series of resolutions that authorised the use of force to protect civilians in situations of armed conflict. The resolution was adopted by the Security Council on April 11, 1991, and it was the first in a series of resolutions that authorised the use of force to protect civilians in situations of armed conflict.

The resolution, which was adopted by the Security Council on April 11, 1991, was the first in a series of resolutions that authorised the use of force to protect civilians in situations of armed conflict. The resolution was adopted by the Security Council on April 11, 1991, and it was the first in a series of resolutions that authorised the use of force to protect civilians in situations of armed conflict.