Public Law in the Park sessions involve public lawyers and students gathering in an idyllic and relaxed setting to learn from, and network with, fellow public law practitioners.

Guest practitioners share new cases and procedure in an informal setting. This method of ‘teaching’ may also involve a career panel and a short skills series assisting with questions on advocacy, writing submissions and statutory interpretation.

The aim is to continue with learning after the classroom, to build on a solid knowledge base and to encourage stimulating discussion amongst public law practitioners and law students.

NSW Young Lawyers Public Law and Government Committee is a group of young lawyers and students which meets monthly to discuss public law.
